ISN'T IT THE TRUTH?

(Contributed in Macleod Gazette)

Over the hill trudged a man behind a mule driving a plow. Said the man to the mule: "Bill, you are a mule the way you work. You are not made in the image of God. Yet here we work, hitched together year in and year out. I often wonder if you work for me or I work for you. Verily, I think you are partly right. You get an' I feel, as punishment, I work as hard as you if not harder. Plowing and cultivating we cover the same ground, but you do it on four legs and I do it on two. You therefore do twice as much per day as you do."

Soon we will be preparing for another corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give you thir' to the land lord for being kind as to let us use the land, spelt of God's creation. One third goes to you and the balance is mine. You consume all your portion with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine with my seven children, six hens, two ducks, and the banker. If I have a dollar short, you get the Bill. You are getting the best of me and I ask—is it fair for a mule, the son of a jacksass, to swindle a man creation of the Lord, out of his sub-

"Why you only help to pull and cultivate the ground, and I alone must cut, shock, and husk the corn, while you look over the fence and heave at me."

All fall and most of the winter the whole family helps in order that we make money to buy new harness and pay interest on the mortgage on you. And you say, 'Not a durn. You never cuss, I even have to do the worrying about the mortgage on your laugh and ungrateful hide.'

The only time I can better it on election day, for I can vote and you can't. And after election, I realize I was big as a jacksass as your papa. Verily, I am prone to wonder if policies was made for men or jacksasses or to make us work."

And that isn't all. Bill. When your dead that's supposed to be the end of you. But me? The person says I am bound for the lower regions forever.

"I am bound to die, but I get to hell," he says. And most of what this says keeps me from getting any kick out of life. Tell me Willyum, considering these things, how can you keep a straight face and look so dumb and solemn?

CANADIAN POTATO PRODUCTION

The estimate of the potato production in Canada in 1933 is 40,350,000 cwt., from 520,000 acres. This is about 800,000 cwt. more than the production of 1932.

The "old-fashioned Christmas" of 1933 goes down into history as the largest single crop ever produced by the Canadian National Railways concerned, according to officials of the Company.

SHORT SESSION PREDICTED FOR NEXT SESSION

Opening Date Is Set With Regard to Ottawa Conference

The date for the opening of next session of the 7th Alberta Legislature, Jan. 11 (C. P.),—An 11-year-old boy was committed to the Red Deer provincial institution for the training of children following an inquest here, which resulted in the finding that he had shot a dog killed his sister, Florence Chester, 15, but that he did not "appreciate the seriousness of the act."

The shooting occurred at the Chesney home December 16.

The member to be elected in the Calgary by-election of Jan. 15 will be able to take his seat at the opening as the period between election day and session opening will permit of all formalities being completed with.

"In view of the fact that the opening of our ministers will attend the Dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa," declared the Premier. As two of our ministers will attend the conference, we wanted to make certain they would be back time. There were governed to some extent by the Calgary by-election."

Sheila Sean Littley

Asked as to the probable length of the session, the Premier said he was hopeful that it would be rather shorter than usual. Replying to a question as to the volume of legislation that would confront the members, the Premier said it was too early to say just how many bills would be brought up for consideration; but he presumed the session would be about the same as usual, which on the average runs around 70.

From inquiries made in the various departments, it appears that there is little legislation of a major nature, although there will be some amendment to existing statutes.

Debate on Report

A representative committee of the house for two weeks has been working on a scheme of state medicine and although a preliminary report was presented at the 1933 session, the final report will be submitted next month. This report undoubtedly will form the subject of a debate. Owing to the tremendous cost of state medicine, it is not expected that any scheme will be adopted before the year future. But the legislature is anxious to have all possible information before it acts.

A house committee is also working on redistribution and a report will be tabled. There are some demands in the house for a reduction in seats, but the committee has found that population has increased in all ridings and it is not expected that any reduction will be reduced, although there may be some amendment of boundaries. Liberals have suggested a reduction in seats without taking a definite stand on the number. Conservatives have pressed for a reduction to 65. There are 63 seats in the present legislature.

SUGGESTIONS

From those constituting the main outside body of the Station, there

comes with the facts and figures all covered with snow and ice or near zero, we are compelled to do what we can to keep our meat market hot. It is true that the pursuit of agriculture requires us, as a Roman writing nearly 2000 years ago said, to accustom ourselves to the cold of winter, but the heads of the cattle of which sell for a high price, and are yielding a fresh vegetable that is greatly appreciated these winter months. The plants were set in rows 6 inches apart and 1 inch apart in the rows to allow for ventilation and to provide for watering the roots without wetting the tops of the plants. Rooting of the heart in storage is induced by lack of ventilation, too warm a cellar, or by the plants being watered from the top. Carrots, beets and parsnips found in moist sand to keep them free from cold, are stored on shelves in single layers to allow free circulation of air around each head. None of the squash, pumpkin, or onions were stored in the root cellar since they need a warm temperature and perhaps dried air for storing. Part of last year's crop of these vegetables were stored near the furnace room in the basement of one of the flats, and the balance in the attic directly above the kitchen stove.

The Stalton root cellar was a point of interest visited by the writer in search of material for this article. It contained a large quantity of vegetables found growing there and which had been dug up from the garden September 30th last and replanted in moist, sandy soil in the cellar. The plants have now reached a high degree of maturity and are yielding a fresh vegetable that is greatly appreciated these winter months. The plants were set in rows 6 inches apart and 1 inch apart in the rows to allow for ventilation and to provide for watering the roots without wetting the tops of the plants.

FRANCE TAXES INCREASED WHEAT ACREAGE

The French ministry of agriculture has the authority to issue a decree to limit the cultivation of wheat.

By the terms of this decree the tax of $12 an acre, Canadian funds, is levied on all lands added to the average area under cultivation during the past three years.

Responsibility

It has become an almost universal habit to enter a new calendar year light-heartedly, in a spirit of gaiety, with nothing but words of happiness and good cheer upon our lips. And it is well that our greetings to one another on this annual occasion should take the form of good wishes for health, happiness and prosperity. But after the jollity attendant upon the passing of the old year and entry into the new be ended, there should come to most of us as intelligent men and women more serious thoughts and a deeper realization of the significance of a new year.

The tearing off from the calendar of the last monthly sheet of the old year, the opening of the diary of the new year at page one; the changing of the figures of the year from 1932 to 1933—these should bring home to us a new and greater sense of our individual responsibility in relation to the year upon which we have entered.

Because many of the big problems of the year are beyond our control; because many of the happenings of the year and its trends in this direction or that will develop irrespective of our views or actions, the fact should not be overlooked that the responsibility is ours for the determination and direction of numerous small matters which actually exert a far greater influence in the making or marring of our lives than these other so-called greater things which are beyond our control.

In the event of a great plague, epidemic of disease most of us would at once become alive to our responsibility to safeguard ourselves, our families, and our community from it. But how many of us give the same thought and accept the same responsibility for the day-to-day state of our health? Yet the state of our health, our vigor of mind and body, is a matter that most of us can determine to a large extent for ourselves. Health is the result of our habits and ways of living. It influences our lives possibly more than any other one thing. The responsibility is mainly our own to promote good health or bring on poor health; it is a responsibility that others cannot accept for us.

Again responsibility for our words and actions rests with ourselves. It is our duty to control our tongues, to weigh our words, to direct our actions. What misunderstandings, heart-burnings, pain and sorrow have been caused by a few thoughtless words; how many friendships have been broken and communities thrown into bitter strife because someone failed to recognize their responsibility before they spoke. It is such a simple thing to light a match, but the results of that simple act depend upon the use to which the lit match is put; whether it is in the hands of a responsible or irresponsible person. It may provide a guide to a lonely wanderer and warmth and comfort and suitably prepared food for him, or it may start a conflagration resulting in the loss of many lives and destruction of much property. Our words, and our individual actions throughout the year, may have like beneficial or disastrous results. The responsibility rests with us.

In these unusual times possibly to a greater extent than in more normal times and under less trying conditions, the responsibility of individuals is increased even in face of the fact that the State is likewise compelled to assume new and heavier responsibilities. At a time of world-wide unemployment, when thousands of individuals find it impossible to procure a livelihood for themselves as they were formerly quite capable of doing, Government must make provision for them. But one of the present developments in our individual, community and economic life as a result of this enforced but temporary shifting of responsibility for the provision of the necessities of life for many, is the dissemination of the idea that such a condition should be made more or less permanent; that in the future the individual should assume and exert far less responsibility for his own well-being, and that the State should assume far more responsibility.

Whatever merit, or desirability, there may be in this view while, however, it is finding acceptance in various countries under varying names, and under which the individual is losing much of his individuality and being more and more kept by, but at the same time moved about at the will of, the State, one thing does remain true so far as the people of Canada are concerned. The responsibility still rests with them as individuals to study this thing thoroughly and to reach their own conclusions as to whether it is in their own best interests and in the interests of their country; that is, whether such a shifting of responsibility will make for a better, nobler, stronger manhood and womanhood, which, in the final analysis, is the object and end of life.

The measure of a man is how he faces and accepts responsibility. All our education has but one main object,—the preparation of youth for the acceptance and discharge of such responsibilities as life may impose upon them. Placing responsibility upon them has been the salvation of many a person. It has led many away from folly, awakening them to the realities of life, widening their vision, and developing powers they little realized they possessed.

Let us throughout 1934 measure up to our responsibilities, whatever they may be, facing them fearlessly and discharging them courageously and efficiently to the best of our ability.

A Tired, Worn Out Woman Can't Make a Happy Home

There is no happiness in the home when the mother is tired and worn out by the never-ending household duties. She gets sunburned and becomes very irritable, has shortness of breath, faint and dizzy, can't sleep, and gets up in the morning feeling as tired as she went to bed, and is downhearted and discouraged.

Milburn's H. & N. Pills will soon convince women it is not necessary to suffer, as they build up the nervous system and bring back the former health and vigor.

Export Of Farm Products

Ham, Bacon, Poultry And Eggs Show Increases

Canada doubled its exports of bacon and hams this year as compared with 1932. The exports of live cattle were over twice as great. The exports of eggs in the shell increased seven-fold. Cheese exports were down.

When the final figures are in, the exports of ham and bacon will total about 75,000,000 pounds which approximately 70,000,000 went to the United Kingdom. Last year 30,693,400 pounds went to the United Kingdom out of a total of 35,820,400 pounds.

Approximately 52,850 live cattle went from Canada to the United Kingdom this year. About 8,500 head went to other countries or a total of over 61,000 head. Last year 16,925 head went to United Kingdom and 11,896 to other countries, or 28,831 altogether.

The egg exports this year totalled about 2,000,000 dozen. Last year the total was only 272,000 dozen. On the other hand practically no eggs were imported. Some years back Canada used to export over 6,000,000 dozen but at that time about as many eggs were imported as exported.

Canada shipped about 1,000,000 pounds of dressed poultry, mostly turkeys, to the British market for the holiday trade. This was about 100,000 pounds more than last year when the movement was started.

The exports of butter this year exceeded last year's, but there was a marked falling off in cheese.

HOW ONE MAN LOST 19 lbs. FAT

Now Feels Absolutely Fit

A fat man is commonly supposed to be good-humoured, easy-going. But there is many a fat man who finds the going far from easy. The following letter describes one typical instance:

"I used to put on weight this year, and developed stoutness in the stomach which was very ugly. I took Kruschen Salts each morning for a month, and reduced my weight 13 lbs. So I took on, and have now lost 19 lbs. altogether. As you can see, I am really rid of headache, and I feel absolutely fit each morning, ready for a hard day's work." —H. M.

Taken every morning, Kruschen salts effect a quickly visible and permanent reduction of substances in all excess watery waste matter. Unless this wastage is regularly expelled Nature will eventually store it up out of the way in the form of ugly fat. Once Kruschen gets into the blood you will soon notice that your prominent abdomen begins to disappear.

Eskimo Goes Modern

Have Had First Labor Strike And Won "Hands Down"

The Eskimos have gone modern. They have had the first labor strike in their history. And they won it.

Out of the vastness of Canada's northland, 300 odd miles within the Arctic circle, comes the unique story of the victory of the diminutive dark-skinned wards of the country. It is the story of the Eskimos organizing labor for the first time and against none other than the famed Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the historic Hudson's Bay Company. By the "moccasin" trail and other means of Arctic travel it reached Ottawa.

Body needed for coastal Arctic posts, a concession of land and company supplies was on hand at Akivik. The usual seasonal pay of $20 per ton for unloading was offered to the Eskimos. Sensing the exigencies of the situation, the wily "stevadore" sprung a surprise and held an impromptu meeting. They demanded $25 per ton and refused to compromise. The police and the company capitulated.

Some 20 Eskimos were involved in the strike. The pay went into a "pool" divided equally between them at the end of the navigation season. Credit accounts for the men were established accordingly for purchases at stores of the Hudson's Bay Company.

Growth Of Language

Constantly Enlarged By Addition Of New Words And Phrases

During the past year the English language has changed and grown, enlarged by the influx of scores of new words, the majority of which will become permanent.

The slang of today will in time become "good English," will find its way into the precincts of authoritative dictionaries and will become an intrinsic part of the language.

Prof. M. W. Wallace, head of the English department of the University of Toronto and principal of University College, drew attention to this fact. Words which have come into being during the past 12 months and now despised by language purists will, in time, take a permanent berth in the language spoken over the greater part of the earth.

Only recently the Oxford dictionary was added to by an appendix which listed words such as gag, gangster and ga-ga, and Prof. F. Newton Scott in a pamphlet for the Society for Pure English listed words such as blaa, applesauce, cinch, buck, booch, bootlegger and wop.

Prof. Wallace stated it would be impossible for a language to remain "pure" as we know it today. Words which were tabooed by purists a century ago are now in common usage, he pointed out.

"The reason people use slang," he added, "is because it gives them an air of being up-to-date, and at the same time allows them to express their thoughts without much effort." It was the fact that it required a minimum of effort to express the thoughts in slang that people used it so extensively, he stated.

One slang word—chizzier—was assured of a permanent place in American English at least when President Franklin D. Roosevelt used it recently in an address. It is now regarded a legitimate word.

Although few others have received the presidential boost they are equally popular. This was the opinion of Prof. Wallace and other English authorities.

Bone Model Of Ship

Beautiful Work On Display In Royal Naval College

One of the most beautiful models of an old-time fighting ship to be found in the world has been put on display in the Royal Naval College at Greenwich, England. It is entirely of bone, and is believed to have been made by one of the French prisoners of war who were held in England. Experts think they fashioned their material from the bones of the meat they were given to eat. The model belongs to Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade. Lieut. George Hunt, curator of the college museum, has just completed repairing and re-rigging it. He used miles of silk twine and 771 ivory blocks and "dead eyes."

SYNOPSIS

Camilia Hoyt and Peter Anson young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a successful, strong-scaling, trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilia is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not in her inheritance money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial law. Her father of law is an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarreled. At a party at exclusive club Peter entertains Camilia's guests with impersonations.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXV.

A brief lull followed Peter's resumption of his own character, during which Terry hustled himself into the mixing of highballs.

"Let's go somewhere," Cathie announced suddenly. She turned sweetly to Camilia. "Not that your party isn't a riot, darling, but we need new inspiration. Let's drive in to the Maddox and dance. We'll just about make it for the real fun!"

Her suggestion carried unanimously with those who expressed themselves, so there followed a general mêlée while the girls renewed their make-up and secured wraps, and the boys formed an imposing parade of powerful motor cars to await them. Another dilemma for Peter Anson. Would this evening—or night—never end? It seemed not. Just went on and on, from one alarming predicament to another. If only he might talk with Camilia alone and persuade her to announce their marriage. That would help somewhat, and provide diversion. As it was, being at the mercy of these, he found himself obliged again to share Terry's rumble seat with Avis, who secretly deplored the fact that she hadn't her own car in which to drive alone with Peter. Still, a rumble seat had its advantages, by which she might profit.

The Maddox Club was filled almost to capacity when they arrived, notwithstanding the economic depression, but enterprising waiters recognized some of their best patrons in the group, and managed tables for the semi-jewels blazed in the smoky haze of the room like beacon lights in a seafoam; laughter sang a high obligato to the crashing notes of heavy chink shuffling feet and the orchestra's accompaniment. Odors of perfumes and cosmetics, food and liquor, tobacco smoke and panting dancers mingled like the ingredients of a vicious cocktail that dulled the senses and perverted a fastidious inclination.

The cafe, the cabaret, the speakeasy, were old institutions, patronized only by their kind. But this elaborate display of artistic talents, ten-thousand-dollar-a-night music, daring vaudeville entertainment and exorbitant food prices, where millionaire and pauper and crook not only rubbed elbows, but bumped into each other on the dance floor, was the offspring of war's lust and chase.

The same instincts loosed for mental and spiritual debauchery instead of physical carnage. Yet conscientious promoters will denounce the one with horror and laud the other with display of patriotism and noble sacrifice.

Peter managed at last to dance with Camilia and to say, "Let's get out of here, honey, I know you didn't want to come. Can't we take your car and let Terry and Avis ride with someone else?"

"I wish we might. But how can we leave when I am the hostess?"

"It was Cathie who wanted to come here. Let her take care of the rest. Tell her that you're not coming back after the next dance. If the others want to leave then, all right. But I've had enough of this, and as have you. Talk about leaving the city to go out to the beach where it's cooler, and then come back to this."

"I know, but you know how restless they get if they have to stay in one place for long. I never expected to bring them here, and I don't care what mother thinks of me for dropping the party. Shall we go back to the beach where it's cool and quiet?"

It was so they escaped, to stroll up the shore in the moonstruck night where only the sound of whispering waves which caressed the sand with gentle fingers disturbed their peace. Its contrast with the place they had quitted was as unbelievable as it was engrossing.

Peter's weary discontent succumbed to its soothing embrace. "Sometimes," he told Camilia, "I have prepared myself for taking you out of that life, but I never shall again. You belong not there—you belong just with me."

"That is what I have told you many times. It is just your kind of life I want to share. Peter, all of it—from the first anxious days of effort and hope and discouragement to the last years of triumph and reward. Never—no matter how much fame and money you may have—shall we return to th' idle waste of riotous living. Wealth may be a blessing as well as a curse."

"It should be—and it will be, for us, Camilia. I was thinking just now of a cottage by the sea—for you and me—with work and happiness to fill our days and nights. A blue sea, under southern skies, where the glamour of the tropics adds its beauty to romance. Perhaps in Sicily—there is a whole village of artists nestled there at the foot of Mt. Etna. Were you ever in Sicily? I wasn't, but I can imagine it."

"Yes, I think I've seen that same village, when I cruised the Mediterranean with mother two years ago. Such quaint picturesque cities and villages as we visited. It would be marvelous to see them again with you Peter," she mused dreamily. "To drift on Lake Como at dawn or sunset and sing a swan song to dull care, to browse in the little shops on the Ponte Vecchio in Florence where you wonder if you have not wandered back into the Middle Ages, to ramble upon the balconies of Valladolid where Cervantes wrote the Don Quixote, to dream in the gardens of Seville!" The soft cadences of her voice mingled with the lulling waves and ceased.

After a long silence, she laughed suddenly over an amusing memory.

"I just remembered a Count Bottock who was on that cruise and gave me a lot of attention."

"There must have been plenty who did that."

"Well, mother was terribly impressed with this particular count, and because I was little more than polite to him, she was in despair. It was reported that he owned huge estates and that in one country residence there was a different dining room for each day of the week. Imagine what a task that would be, not only to remember what day it was but which room corresponded with this!"

"That's worse than having to turn your clothes inside out every day so it will look as if you had a change," sardonically.

"He was also said to be a heavy gambler at Deauville and Monte Carlo, losing as much as one hundred thousand in one night's play."

"Not half as bad as my losing two seventy tonight at bridge. You don't know what a narrow escape that was for my honesty."

"I held my breath so long over that game, I almost forgot how to breathe. But aren't you sorry you were not more than polite to the count? Some day, when you are hungry and living with me you will remember those seven dining rooms."

"Not as long as I have the whole world of love with you, a different dining room for every day in the year couldn't tempt me. Oh, Peter, I wish we need not wait to realize our dreams..."

He sat up suddenly in the sand. "We're not going to wait. That is just what I wanted to talk to you about tonight. Why not tell this crowd the truth in the morning, even if we can't afford to live together yet?"

"Peter, that isn't keeping your promise to me!"

"But don't you see how difficult it is, and will it not be? Not only secretly, but we have to dodge all kinds of issues with other people. Please announce our marriage, dear."

"And get myself discovered so you will have to take care of me? No I can't do that. But I promise this; just as soon as I get a position that will pay me enough to live with Rose, you may tell the world I am your wife. Not before!" emphatically.

Peter lay back on the soft white sand again, with a sigh of resignation. "Well, no use to waste this blessed time in argument. Only I hope that we can be together soon, for always."

"We shall," she promised, bending down to kiss him. She lay in his arms in the wave-washed silence, content in the happiness of the thought that she belonged there. Weariness hushed their voices and the song of the waves accompanied by the breeze, lulled them to sleep, while they awaited the return of the rest of the party. It was dawn when Terry and Avis found them there.

Seals Cut Steps In Ice

Only Way They Can Reach Surface To Breathe

Seals actually cut steps in the slippery surface with the great canines or teeth. As soon as the teeth are placed in position, the head is moved rapidly from side to side until the ice has been cut away sufficiently to afford a footing for the front flippers of the animal. Each step has to be laboriously cut after this fashion until the body is far enough out of the water to be thrust up the rest of the way by a kick of the hind flippers.

Only Check Is Court

When Motorists Fail To Realize Responsibility To Public

Operating on tracks, trains escape many of the dangers incident to other wheeled traffic. In railway yards the danger is further lessened by the exclusion of the public. Yet in these yards may be seen placards warning trainmen that the maximum permitted speed is 15 miles an hour. In the streets, which are without the protection afforded the railway yard operations, automobiles travel normally, if not legally, at 25 to 30 miles an hour. The death rate due to motor traffic is practically accepted as inevitable. Five deaths from diphtheria occasion more concern than fifty from automobile accidents. Far nobody seems either to have been able to do anything about it, or to have made any serious attempt in that direction.

When motorists fail to realize their responsibility to the public, the only check upon them is the courts.

Frequently the courts have appeared averse to treat motor criminals in the manner prescribed by the law. Drunken driving is obviously an offence which cannot be tolerated if there is to be safety on the highways. Yet time and again where the evidence has shown a motorist to have been drunk in charge of car, the charge is reduced or is not visited with the full penalty prescribed by law.

In the latest case, the man who pleaded guilty to drunk driving was a shell-shocked soldier. There is some doubt whether a shell-shocked soldier should drive a car even when sober.

There have, too, been cases where juries have considered poor visibility as a sufficient explanation of a fatality. But poor visibility should itself be a sufficient warning to a motorist to enable him to avoid becoming involved in an accident.

To motorists is applicable with especial force the adage that eternal vigilance is the price of safety. The enforcing of that vigilance is the duty of all who feel any sense of shame in the heavy toll of motor fatalities—Toronto Evening Telegram.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THE CYCLE

The dead leaves, falling flat down to ground While under hedgerows Piles many a mound. Through them wind rustles, On them snow sifts, Pale winter sunshine Along them drifts.

So slowly crumpling Into decay, The winter weather Rotts and wears. In spring how gay! They danced in mirth, That now are dusty And dry as earth.

Yet these poor leaves Which dust return. In some fair springtime Will glow, will burn In rose or lily, Or violet or roses. They will come back when The long years pass!

To Keep Air Pure

At a cost of $200,000, two of Birmingham's largest electrical generating stations are to be fitted with chimneys 300 feet high equipped with the bases with electro filters, to eliminate the emission of grit and fume.

THE ADVANCE WEATHER BULLETIN

For Western and Central Canada, embracing British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario.

Monday, January 15, 1934—Change to warmer in central provinces, with light precipitation, especially in southeastern sections and about the Great Lakes regions.

Tuesday, Jan. 16—Definite rise of temperature in nearly all sections and many places light snows; continue unsettled about Great Lakes country and the southeast.

Wednesday, Jan. 17—Probably light snows about central provinces, with some change to much lighter parts in west and central parts.

Thursday, Jan. 18—Weather in general becomes much colder, unsettled, blustery winds by way of the northwest amounting to a storm in some parts.

Friday, Jan. 19—Temperature slightly moderate in the northwest; becomes much quieter and clearer, but in east still cold and unsettled.

Saturday, Jan. 20—In central regions colder and unsettled, with snow flurries and most precipitation about the southeast and Great Lakes regions; slightly colder to northeast.

Sunday, Jan. 21—Temperature tends to rise in central sections, but continued light, scattered snows; clearing in northeast of central provinces, but in the southwest sections remains unsettled.

Week of Jan. 15 to 21, 1934, in central provinces begins with a change from extremely cold to much more moderate temperatures and generally unsettled about Great Lakes country, ending snow flurries, near mid week becoming more settled and milder conditions. There is steady decline of temperatures with considerable variation between different sections; like warmer to southwest, but very cold about northeast; also considerable precipitation around the Great Lakes regions and southwest sections, but in far northeast remaining clear and very cold.

On an average throughout a series of 10 days there is a steady decline in the central provinces during times of extreme cold weather in January, but this year the calculation seems to indicate both unusual cold spells and somewhat more than the normal snowfall. Throughout Alberta and Saskatchewan the average snowfall for this month is less than one foot, but in the northwest, however, there was three times as much, or more than the normal, much of it falling during this week, although only mild storm conditions are forecasted for the week.

This is for northwest regions: Maxima and minima occur 1 day later than in central provinces, 2 days later than the Great Lakes and 3 days later on Atlantic coast.

WORLD'S 'LOST' GOLD AMOUNTS TO MORE THAN ELEVEN BILLIONS

About 550 millions ounces of gold has disappeared from the regular trading channels and passed into the hands of people who guard it against profitable uses. The value of this gold is normally about eleven billion ($30.67 an ounce) but at present prices it is worth more than 18 billions. This is equal to about half the total amount of that no bank large enough, no cause hitherto produced in 400 years. This enough to cover her long accumulation.

Many in this district are entirely without feed, and using straw whenever it can be located.

SOUTHERN HEMISPHERE HARVEST IN PROGRESS

The new wheat crops of Argentina and Australia are now moving to market and shipments from the Southern Hemisphere are reported. Argentina's crop is estimated at 256 million and Australia's at 100 million bushels. The shipments may slow up somewhat due to control measures by the government and also due to the International Wheat Agreement and the quota allotment.

known to lie among the wreckage of ships on the bottom of the ocean. The world's greatest gold hoards are in the East and the great triangular peninsula of Asia is called the world's greatest sink of gold. Perhaps India has as much as five billion dollars in hoarded gold. This is equal to nearly $15 each of the country's 350 million people. It is exceedingly difficult to get any of this gold away from India. That country holds fast to its gold hoard. No investment is safe enough, no bank large enough, no cause hitherto produced in 400 years. This enough to cover her long accumulation.
